

November 20, 2023

To Whom It May Concern:

I am pleased to recommend David Goeb for a position as an English language teacher. I directly supervised Mr. Goeb from March of 2020 until August of 2022 in his role as an Instructor in the ELS Program at the Faculty of International Studies at Kindai University in Higashi-Osaka. He worked successfully within our program to prepare first-year students with the English communication and academic skills they would need to study abroad at an intensive language program in the US.

Our program uses the ELS curriculum (www.els.edu), with lessons focusing on speaking and writing in practical real-world contexts, and foundational academic skills. Students are placed into seven levels from CEFR A2- to B2-. Instructors plan and teach about 30 hours per week using set textbooks, syllabi, and assessments. We support and encourage creativity and collaboration among instructors.

Mr. Goeb's exceptional strength was his ability to create a positive and engaging atmosphere in the classroom. He focused on the students, building a solid rapport with and among them, helping them to feel comfortable and willing to communicate. He extensively used group work to support a cooperative and supportive learning environment. The learning activities that he designed often made use of movement, keeping students physically active and mentally engaged throughout the 90-minute lessons, so they felt motivated to engage with the curriculum and textbook material. In my observations, I noticed that students were cheerful, attentive, and ready to listen to Mr. Goeb's instructions. I saw that students were actually excited to communicate in discussions and role plays, to write organized paragraphs, and to help each other understand challenging reading and listening material.

Mr. Goeb's student survey results offer further evidence of his success in motivating students to participate and learn. His scores for all classes were regularly above average, and notably high in the following areas:

- "makes class interesting and enjoyable"
- "is prepared an organized"
- "gives me many chances to practice my English"
- "explains the lessons well"
- "helps me if I have a question".

Student comments often mention that he is "kind" and "funny", that it was "easy to ask questions", and that his lessons were "interesting", "fun", and "comfortable". They said it was "easy to understand" his lessons, and that he taught them useful language and information about life in America.

As an employee and colleague, Mr. Goeb was reliable, punctual, well-organized, and well-prepared for his lessons. He got along very well with colleagues and staff, often collaborating with fellow teachers on lesson planning and materials development. Always ready to learn and grow as a teacher, Mr. Goeb participated positively and actively in professional development workshops, and was receptive to constructive comments during post-observation feedback discussions with me.

In summary, I value the time I worked with Mr. Goeb in our program. I was continually impressed by his ability to connect with students and help them feel excited about learning and using English to communicate in the real world. If you are looking for an instructor to bring students out of their shells and connect with English as a genuine means of communication, Mr. Goeb would be a valuable member of your team.

If you require any further elaboration or information about David Goeb's work experience with us, please do not hesitate to contact me for details.

Sincerely,

Mary Christianson
Academic Director, ELS Program at Kindai University
mchristianson@els.edu | mobile: 080-7852-9158
ELS homepage: <https://www.els.edu/>

Office:

Faculty of International Studies, Building 18-N304
3-4-1 Kowakae, Higashi-Osaka 577-0818

<https://www.kindai.ac.jp/international-studies/>

International Studies brochure - details about the ELS Program on page 3:

https://www.d-pam.com/kindai/2311058/index.html?tm=1#target/page_no=1